Shaunna Tuckwood new queen

Saturday was a big day for local figure skaters. The Carnival Queen was chosen and over 180 members of the figure skating club performed for parents, grandparents and spectators in Drayton Valley's annual ice extravaganza.

Shaunna Tuckwood was crowned queen during the intermission of the second performance and will appear in the Blowout Days Parade.

Carnival chairman Lois Fankiewicz estimated total attendance for the two performances to be about 1,700. "There were a lot of people who were not parents or grandparents," she said. "They were just fans I guess."

From the youngest skaters in the Bunsen routine to partners using plans borrowed from Alberta Culture, Les Tucker and Arved Erickson constructed the display case from raw materials purchased by the society. It is located in the back part of Expressions Arts and Crafts.

The 180 skaters were worked into 19 routines and spent up to 22 hours per week in preparation. The children in the group lessons had been practicing for the past six weeks and the skaters taking private lessons had worked the previous two weeks.

Shaunna Tuckwood was chosen the carnival queen. She was escorted by Constable Jeff Smith.

Museum goal one step closer

By Jack Morrison
The Historical Society of Drayton Valley is one step closer to its long-term goal with the completion of a display case.

Using plans borrowed from Alberta Culture, Les Tucker and Arved Erickson constructed the display case from raw materials purchased by the society. It is located in the back part of Expressions Arts and Crafts.

"Alberta Culture has had a lot of experience with museums and have a type of case that has proved very suitable for displays," said Nevis LaBranche, president of the society. The display is open to public viewing at any time, but on Wednesdays a volunteer member is available to answer questions.

According to LaBranche, the society was formed May 15, 1980 under the instigation of Mark Pickup, then Executive Social Services director. The society received a grant from the government during the 75th anniversary celebration. The money from the grant was used to finance a proposal to begin the search for suitable articles and equipment.

Edith Deby was another driving force in the inception of the historical society, added LaBranche. Currently Deby is compiling a scrapbook recalling the history of Drayton Valley area.

Other funding for the society has come in the form of donations from various oil companies. "We contacted the oil companies in early 1982," LaBranche said. She added the money received from both corporate and private donations will go toward the operating costs such as leased space and telephone.

"The long-term objective of the society," said LaBranche, "is to find a permanent home for the Drayton Valley Museum. We are looking for a place with land around it to accommodate donated equipment."

Parents get the basics

Colin Cavanagh demonstrates basic programming to Ian and Vicki Johnston.

Seventeen parents experienced the world of computer programming Feb. 17 at H.W. Pickup Junior High School.

The parental computer awareness program was initiated by Pat Kiehlhauch. The two-hour tour of BASIO computer programming language allowed the parents the opportunity to experience what their children were learning in school.

As awareness grows, computers are becoming more and more popular. People are becoming more interested in being able to operate computers as a tool, not a toy, said Kiehlhauch.

H.W. Pickup currently has 17 mini-computers. With 15 in place and five more on order, Apple's comprise the bulk of their computer hardware.

Kiehlhauch also runs an evening adult programming class that meets Tuesday and Thursday. Sometimes, she said, those computers are on 12 hours a day.

Lodgepole blowout peanuts compared to long term effects

An all-out study by the government on the effects of the Lodgepole blowout will distract from the real issue.

This little blowout was peanuts compared to the long-term effects of sulphur emitting plants across the province, said Dr. Byron Beck, head of the Animal section of the Veterinary Industry Lab in a speech to the annual meeting of the Rural Crime Watch.

The real issue is why the blowout was caused, he said. A $3 million study is not needed to discover the effects of the blowout, he added.

According to Dr. Beck, the Lodgepole blowout did not cause the damage suspected based on the samples sent in. The abortions sent in could not be attributed to the blowout, but to other things such as Bovine Venereal Disease and especially to mouldy feed.

Most of the hydrogen sulphide damage is caused by the corrosive nature of the gas. In Canada the acceptable level of hydrogen sulphide is 0.1 ppm compared with the United States where the acceptable level is 20 ppm.

Dr. Beck, a spokesman for the group, said it is from the U.S. that we get most of our information on the effects of sour gas. People work eight hours a day in that kind of atmosphere with no long-term effects.

Dr. Beck recommended that if anyone suspects they have livestock problems to get a good veterinarian and to send samples to Edmonton.

A new executive was elected at the annual meeting. Ron Seale from Brock Creek replaced Lucas Plummer as president. Bob Kitching from Cayford replaced Ron Cornelius as vice-president. Maurven Schwab, secretary, was the only nominee for that position. A new position of treasurer was created with Vern Hinshaw from Drayton Valley filling the position.

Society

Currently the society has leased space from Expressions for a nominal fee. The society has donated space in the basement of the county building. This space, explained LaBranche, is used as an office and a storage place for some of the valuable donations.

On display are a few old books, a projector and a typewriter. The typewriter was donated by Amy and Russell Hutchinson, the proprietors of the Leland Store and Post Office. When the Hutchinsons took over the store from Amy's father, Fred Elgin in 1961, they found the typewriter in inventory.

All articles donated are appreciated, said LaBranche, and the donor receives a receipt for income tax. LaBranche added these donations can be used as capital for the society in their pursuit of government grants. The government will match the society's accrued capital with an equal value grant up to a limit of $6,000.

In order for the society to get the government grant they must be open a minimum of 200 hours a year.

In March, the Society plans to have Ian Patterson conduct a seminar on the proper method of cataloguing articles.

Cal Bartlett, vice-president of the Historical Society, places an old newspaper in the society's new display case.

Brownies think of friends

The Drayton Valley chapters of the Brownies, Girl Guides and Pathfinders observed the organization's annual Thinking Day Sunday.

Forty-eight members from two Brownie packs and two Girl Guide packs met with six Pathfinders and the eight members of the Ennawalla Brownie pack.

Publicly representative Betty Johnson said the day coincides with the birthdays of the group's founders, Lord and Lady Baden-Powell - Feb. 22. "It's basically a day set aside for members around the world to think about our fellow Scouts and Guides," she explained.

Thinking Day is also part of Guide-Scout Week and Johnson said it was the first segment of the week for the local group.

The individual packs and companies will be carrying on projects and activities on their own, she added.

Planetarium pays visit

Students enter the planetarium.

The sky will open in H.W. Pickup Junior High every night until March 6 as Alberta Culture's mobile planetarium visits Drayton Valley. The wood and fiberglass dome houses a projector and viewing facilities which can reproduce approximately 1,000 stars, the sun, the moon and five of the brighter planets. One of the two instructors for the planetarium, Cynthia Waxman, added there is also a slide projector for detailed pictures and a tape deck for incidental music.

The majority of the show will be held for students but she said there will be free shows open to the public Monday, Tuesday and Thursday evenings at 7:00 p.m.

Waxman said the structure is about 4 m (13.5 ft) and 4.5 m in diameter. It can hold up to 30 adults or 50 children for each show. She said the audience is invited to ask questions during the show. Weather permitting there will also be a special attraction. "After the evening show is over we have a small telescope (20 cm)," she said.

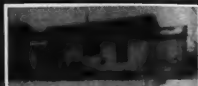

The instrument will provide close-ups of the planets, galaxies, star clusters and if the moon is up viewers will be able to look at craters on its surface.

GRAIN FARMERS CANNOT AFFORD 'USER PAY'

Parliamentary writers are preparing the first draft of a Bill which may transfer uncalculated freight costs to farmers.

No relationship between farmers' ability to pay and grain freight rates is included in the government's plan.

Freight costs payable by farmers will escalate drastically after 1987, even with modest inflation.

Farmers are invited to a public meeting at the Lamoureux Hall, Fort Saskatchewan at 1:00 p.m. on Thursday, March 3rd, 1983. The meeting is designed to help you understand how the plan announced February 1st by J. L. Pepin will affect grain producers. Be there if you care about your future.

A MESSAGE TO GRAIN PRODUCERS FROM ALBERTA WHEAT POOL

TransAlta application approved

Application by TransAlta Utilities for an interim electric rate increase was approved in January by the Alberta Public Utilities Board (PUB). The new rates take effect Feb. 1 with respect to consumption on and after Jan. 1.

The across-the-board increase is 12 per cent net of income tax rebate. The PUB approved a 15 per cent increase in rates; however, the net increase to the customer is 12 per cent due to a change in the Alberta Income Tax Rebate Program. Hearings to determine final rates will be held in the spring of 1983. The interim increase has been approved on a refundable basis, should there be a change when the final rates are determined.

The increases will mean an additional $4 a month for TransAlta's direct residential customers. The company's last rate adjustment in September, 1982, averaged four per cent.

In its findings, the PUB said that to restrict TransAlta to some pre-determined percentage increase in rates, "would not be in the long-term interest of the present or future customers and would not be fair to the producers in Alberta."

The PUB also noted that the company "cannot, reduce costs if such cost reductions jeopardize the safety and adequacy of service."

As this interim increase will recover only part of the revenue required this year, TransAlta will apply for a second increase of similar size in mid-1983. The actual amount of this increase will depend on the company's revenue requirements for the year, to be determined by the PUB.

Local shop opens for craftsmen

Major part of business is framing.

Looking in the front window, colorful, detailed and painted ceramic sculptures stare back. As you walk in, the owner, Ann Krawchuk, says she is in the city travelling through Expressions Arts and Crafts.

"I have always been craft minded," said Ann Krawchuk, the owner and sole proprietor of Expressions Arts and Crafts.

She and her husband Steve owned the Shell station for 10 years. When they decided to sell it she said, "all of a sudden I was free and found time on my hands."

The idea for Expressions came from a few trips to the Farmers' Market. "If you are not there every week, people don't know where to find you," she explained. "I thought a store of this nature would be good for those people who do not mass produce, but only make a few items."

Even though Expressions has been operating since Nov. 1, 1982, Krawchuk said she is still fighting the image that Expressions is a craft supply store. The outlet handles only arts and crafts produced by local people. "Most of our suppliers are young mothers and retired people," she said.

All of the arts and crafts are taken on consignment and it is the supplier who sets the price.

Krawchuk said she would like to work more with the younger generation.

"I would like to see their work in here more often. Even if they just wanted to display it."

A group of school children got together and displayed some of their handicrafts in the last three days of the first semester.

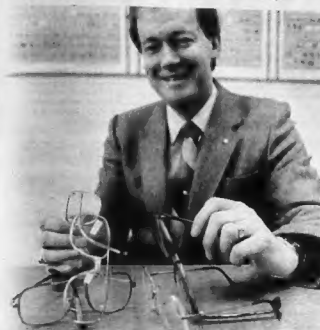

Arts and crafts are just one facet of Expressions. Ann has a section of the store devoted to framing. "Here framing takes about a week and half compared to an average of about three months in Edmonton."

Diversification does not end here. Rental wedding cakes and decorations are in the works.

Student prefers the country

Jerry Bartlett is this week's student at random.

Eldorado Elementary student Jerry Bartlett wasn't pleased with school Thursday — but he speculated it may have had something to do with the taste he had written that morning.

"Teachers are good," he said, "but some of them aren't" so good because they make you do a lot of work."

It was following that statement he decided his opinion may have been colored by the morning's events.

He then went on to say he likes mathematics. "I'm best at that."

Physical education is his other favorite subject, he added.

A Grade 4 student, he's from the area and until recently was raised on a farm near Violet Grove.

"I'd rather live out in the country," he said, "because I've got a horse out there."

Shadow is a buckskin just coming two years old and he hopes to begin training him soon. He said he'll be used for pleasure riding and in harness for sleighs and wagons.

In the summer he likes to play soccer. It's the only organized sport he plays but he plays hockey, football and baseball with his friends.

After school he plays video games at home and often shares the controls with his father. "I also go skating lots," he added.

He admits he can't skate very well but laughs "practice makes perfect."

The Edmonton Oilers are his favorite hockey team and he likes Mark Messier and Glenn Anderson as his number one players.

Where are our trust fund dollars?

Dear Editor:

As an Alberta taxpayer I am very concerned and distressed by the way our Heritage Savings Trust Fund has been handled.

For some years now, Premier Lougheed's Conservative government has been putting aside Alberta's surplus tax dollars along with all revenues into the Heritage Trust Fund. As taxpayers we were assured that this money was being used wisely so as to assist in the future well-being of Albertans.

Although our reigning government insisted that investments, loans, etc. were made in our best interests, I always found it hard somehow to believe, because we as taxpayers were mostly kept in the dark as to how these dollars were being invested. (Ask yourself why Heritage Trust Fund investments are not published for public knowledge as a financial report as other companies with shareholders are required to do.)

I recently heard that this year Alberta is expecting a deficit; one which our Alberta government cannot carry over because there are not sufficient funds left in our Heritage Trust Fund. Thus last week Premier Lougheed was away trying to borrow money to cover this deficit.

Although I think Premier Lougheed has done a fair job of managing matters concerning Alberta, and has tried to aid in the development of Alberta's oil industry, this does not mean that we as taxpayers must go along with everything that is set down by his Conservative government.

Why aren't we asking where is our Heritage Trust Fund? Why does Alberta need to borrow money to cover our present deficit?

After all, what was our Alberta Heritage Trust Fund set up for?

I think if more Albertans were to ask these questions we just might find the answers; but with our asking, we may never find out!

Would it not be a better idea to set up industries within Alberta for future generations with our Alberta Heritage Trust Fund instead of loaning millions to other provinces, countries and corporations?

Mariannetta Joun

Taxpayers call shots

Dear Editor:

Three news items this past week again brings back to mind the content of my last letters to you. The federal government is spending a budget of about $4,000 per man, woman and child of this country. The provincial government is also spending the balance of a budget which represents $4,000 per man, woman and child of this province.

The county, as expected, is also softening us up for another raise in municipal and school taxes as suggested in the last paper.

The residents of the county, province and country have taken drastic cuts in pay, whether through layoff, competitive business practice, or cuts in hours or wages to hold jobs.

It is now time to tell our civil service teachers, etc. that are protected by union contracts and paid by governments or government grants, that they won't get raises this year, but can expect a cut in pay to approximate the losses taken by the rest of the taxpayer public.

It is not reasonable that these people who have the best of protection for their jobs, good government subsidized pensions and most extravagant holiday provisions should demand and receive pay increases as big or bigger than the pay cuts taken by the rest of us.

I strongly urge our members, M.L.A.s and M.P.s to spend our tax money as I spend my funds. Since the economy is bad and the auto workers got a large increase in pay and auto prices went up, I won't be buying any new vehicles.

Since my customers have taken wage and equipment rate cuts, I also cut my rate and have lowered my wage bill.

My income has dropped; I have a certain amount available for improvements and when it is spent, I won't spend any more. This may cost $10 per hour for one man or $6 per hour for two men, but my expenditure will be the same.

When will governments learn that we pay their wages and provide the funds that they spend and that we are entitled to the best value for our dollars?

When will the taxpayer public come to realize that we pay the bills and could and should insist on compliance with our wishes?

Lindale postmistress retires

Amy Hutchinson sits in the doorway of the old post office and general store building her father ran.

With the retirement of Amy Hutchinson as the Lindale postmistress an era has come to an end. Since 1922 the post office and general store have been operated by her father and then herself and her husband.

Together with her husband, Russell, she took over operation of the post office and general store in 1981. Prior to that her father was the postmaster and store operator.

They are now in the process of selling their store and Stephen and Virginia Tweedie have taken over the post office.

The building which houses the store and post office was built by the Hutchinsons in 1982. Amy's father, Fred Bijou, had built a new post office on the present site in 1942, moving from the old building where she grew up.

Her parents moved to the Lindale area in 1912 from the United States. She says her father had filed a claim on the homestead the previous year and returned with his family.

"The first house they had when they moved up here was a log house with a sod roof," she adds. That was on the site next to the old two-story post office which was built in the 1920s.

She was born in Gairland. "That was the closest place to anything like a hospital," she says. After leaving the area in 1944 she met her husband-to-be in Fort McMurray and they were married in 1946. They lived there until 1951 when her father died and they took over the post office and store.

They are still operating the store but are hoping to sell it soon and move to Edmonton. Russell says there's a good living to be made from it but Amy adds that she doesn't drive so they prefer to retire in a city where they have more services at their disposal.

County to axe permit ads

Parkland County will not advertise its building permit approvals, councillors decided last week.

Reeve Les Miller said he was contacted by someone wishing to know who has received permits so as to offer his services for hire. Doing so would mean placing advertisements for every permit, including garages, fences and the like.

Planning Director Court Breckenridge recommended against complying with the request, saying the existing methods of people hiring firms are sufficient.

Oil sands represent huge investment

By John Gorman

The future of oil sands mega projects in northeastern Alberta has been the subject of much speculation since the decision to shelve the Alameda and Cold Lake projects.

The two plants would have represented more than $20 billion in investment which has been foregone because of the combined effects of the National Energy Program, general economic recession, high interest rates and a reduced demand for crude oil. Originally, construction of the plants was delayed because the federal and provincial governments could not work out tax, royalty and revenue sharing agreements.

The question now remains whether there will ever be multi-billion dollar projects mounted in this area, or whether we will ultimately see the vast oil sands potential developed with a series of smaller scale plants. The current research and development effort certainly appears to be turning in this direction.

Whatever methods of development and extraction are employed, the oil sands of northeast

Alberta represent one of Canada's most valuable resource assets. Since before the arrival of the white explorers in the 1700s the abundance of the gummy sand and oil mixture in the Fort McMurray area has been a continual source of fascination.

Working at the rate of about $800 per hour, Drayton Valley auctioneer Wendy Bakura and his family raised $4,008 for the Drayton Valley Association for the Developmentally Handicapped at this year's charity auction.

Bidding began at 7:00 p.m. and continued until 12:30 a.m. for an estimated 350 items. Over 300 people spent from as little as one dollar for caps to $170 for a load of pots. Two hockey sticks, one autographed by Wayne Gretzky and the other by the entire Oiler hockey team, went for $70 while one of Mark Messier's sticks was bought for $18.

A sale of baked goods and handicrafts brought another $700, according to Norma Howatt, secretary-treasurer of the fund raising committee. "With things being tighter we were really pleased," she said.

Proceeds from the sale will go toward renovations of the Beehive Workshop which will mostly include brickwork the front of the building. Howatt said the total cost of the work is expected to cost about $15,000.

The group responsible for the workshop is the Drayton Valley Association for the Developmentally Handicapped. They will hold a charity ball April 30 for further money and she said they hope to raise the balance of the needed funds through government grants.

Tania Bakura passes out a cake someone bought and then gave to her to distribute to the crowd.

Bubblegum, hot chocolate and marshmallows were just three of the "fun" things children at Eldorado Elementary School experienced last Tuesday afternoon at the school's Fun Day.

The bubblegum relay involved each member of a team. The object of the event was to race down the field and upon reaching the end grab a piece of bubblegum, unwrap it, begin chewing and then race back to tag the next member of the relay team.

Other events the Grades 1 and 2 children participated in were waltz pull, bean bag throw, tug-of-war and crazy carpet races.

"We don't recruit the winners and losers," said Ross Betton, vice-principal. "We want to get across the idea that participating is fun."

The Grade 4 class at Elementary B also joined in the fun. They participated in such events as morrisone races, chawgnaw style toboggan races and tug-of-war.

To cap off the fun each student received a sometimes very warm cup of hot chocolate with a marshmallow in it.

Town and county discussion to re-open

By Stuart Adams
Although the April 30 date for withdrawal of fire protection services to County of Parkland residents still stands a meeting was held Thursday between county Reeve Les Miller and Drayton Valley Mayor Bob Mayhew to move toward re-opening the situation.

"Both the mayor and I will be recommending to our councils that we reopen the negotiations," said Miller.

The conflict arose from the town's request for more than the $4,353 allocated by the county as its share of the $100,000 operating budget for the fire department. Town council maintains that approximately $35,000 is the amount the county should be contributing as its fair share.

Further disagreements developed over the agreement signed by the two bodies which covers the cost-sharing arrangements.

The county responded to the town's request in a Jan. 24 letter by indicating negotiations were out of the question under the most recent agreement signed in 1981. But the agreement held by the town indicates that agreement was to be renegotiated each year.

At the Feb. 10 meeting of town council a resolution was passed which would sever the town fire department's tie with the county as of April 30.

A letter informing the county of the decision was sent to the county by the town last week. "I was contacted by the county and asked if we were approachable on the subject," said Mayor Mayhew. "We're always approachable."

He went on to add he is optimistic the situation can be resolved and that the county is its wisdom will take its responsibility a little further.

"The same Drayton Valley is as area as well as town," he continued.

"We as a community responsible for the people within the corporate limits."

"However, the people in the surrounding area are also entitled in my opinion to enjoy the same privileges and facilities as the townspeople," he concluded. "But it's the county's responsibility to see that they receive these privileges."

Pinafore bigger than Mikado

If last year's performance of The Mikado was any indication, P.M.S. Pinafore should be even better received.

"From what we've seen and been told this is going to be bigger and better than The Mikado was last year," said D.V. Presents Treasurer Audrey Smale.

The group is bringing in the Gilbert and Sullivan operetta as it presents its 1983 season.

Staged by Edmonton Opera's travelling company, the two-work is billed as being "full of wit, wits and wit, and wit with wit, wit, wit and wit."

She and one of the members on the board are in love and the unhappy situation takes wit after wit.

The action takes place on the quarter deck of a British ship docked in Portsmouth, England. Set in 1878, the story revolves around the betrothal of the captain's daughter to the admiral of the British navy.

Smale said The Mikado, also by Gilbert and Sullivan, drew many good comments last year and "I Pinafore goes over this year probably being in the Pirates of Penzance next year."
